Big building projects in progress

BY HEIDI MARTTILA-LOSURE

Frederick sometimes seems a little quieter in the summer when school is out of session, but not this year. The town will be humming with construction activity through the fall as two big projects change the look of Frederick's Main Street. The town's sewer upgrade project is also ongoing, and several homeowners are working on building projects as well.

Frederick Area Fire & Rescue is achieving a long-discussed dream of constructing a new fire station.

Frederick Area sends 12 to state

FASD JOURNALISM

Twelve athletes represented Frederick Area in 13 events at the State B Track and Field Meet on May 28-29 in Rapid City.

In previous years, athletes advanced to state by meeting the standard for an event or finishing first or second in an event at regions. This year, the rules were different: The top 24 in the state advanced to the state meet.

"To make the state track meet is an accomplishment in itself,"

Projects: Work to be done by fall

The current fire station was designed for the size of vehicles that were available at the time it was constructed, according to Fire Chief Kevin Barton. Trucks are getting bigger, and the department needs more room to house those vehicles.

They also will have more room to move about around them. "We will be able to train with the trucks inside, rather than have to take them outside when it's cold-er out," Barton said.

The new building, located on the corner of the intersection of Main Street and Third Avenue, will have two drive-through areas—one for its No. 1 truck, and one for a pickup truck and a new trailer the department is purchasing for its side-by-sides. The new trailer is being funded through a grant from the State of S.D. Wildland Fire Division.

The drive-through spots will be at the south end of the building. Behind two other doors will be the department's tanker truck and the ambulance.

The new building will include a room for firefighters' gear. This allows the gear to be separated from other areas of the building to reduce the hazard of carcinogens that might be on the gear after fighting fires.

The rest of the main floor includes a utility area for washing gear, a shop area, a kitchen, and men's and women's bathrooms.

The second floor includes a training area, two offices, and storage.

Summit Construction from Platte, S.D., is doing the exterior construction. To save on costs, interior rooms are being built by volunteer firefighters.

The department's past and future fundraisers are paying for the building.

The building should be completed by Sept. 1. "We want to have our fundraiser in there this fall," Barton said.

Along Main Street and Railroad Avenue is another big building project: The Frederick Farmers Elevator is adding a million bushels of grain storage with two 500,000-bushel bins.

This is a huge expansion to the elevator's current storage capacity of 580,000 bushels.

"We need more storage," explained Junior Linthorne, manager of the elevator. "Some bins to the east are getting in tough shape. And yields ain't getting any smaller."

He added that if all the prevent-plant acres had been planted last year, there is no way they could have held it all.

In addition to an increase in supply, there's also more demand.

"This is all happening because of AGP," Linthorne said, referring to Ag Processing Inc.'s soybean processing facility in Aberdeen, which opened in 2019.

"Guys north of us don't have time to haul all the way to Aberdeen," he said, so instead they sell their soybeans at the Frederick elevator, which in turn sells them to AGP. "Nobody wants their combine sitting in the field. This gives them another place to dump so nobody has to sit."

The bins will change the skyline of Frederick—measured to the very top, they will be 105 feet tall. "If the water tower was down (the hill) where the bins are, they would be pretty much the same height," Linthorne said.

The bins are scheduled to be done before harvest.

Both Barton and Linthorne commented on the changes coming to Frederick this summer.

"It's good to see," Linthorne said, adding that the Community Store benefits from the activity when construction crews go there for lunch.

"The town's doing real well," Barton said.

Musicians perform spring concert for live audience

FASD JOURNALISM

Besides the weather, the Frederick Area K-12 spring concert had one major difference from the Christmas concert—parents and guests were able to watch and enjoy the concert in person!

Mrs. Langeley's first in-person concert did not disappoint as the elementary and high school choirs and bands put on a show. The Disney theme and songs left parents longing for the old-school movies of their childhood.

Mrs. Langeley thanked everyone for their support in coming to watch the concert and encouraged the students to practice over the summer.

Young team looks to future

FASD JOURNALISM

It was a season of learning and finding their swing as the Titans team improved small strokes at a time throughout the season.

With a roster of all under-classmen the future looks to be brighter than the 2021 season.

Postseason action saw Mac Kosters and Madison Dettler participate in Regions, but they missed out on the State Meet.

Cultivating civic pride

Editor's note: F.Y.I. readers might find this opinion piece interesting, especially as a variety of projects are moving forward in the community.

BY JEFF SIEGLER, REVITALIZE OR DIE

We are all subject to the effects of apathy. Every one of us is tempted to do less, give less or accept less. While this might be our nature—to go with the flow, to adapt to lowering standards—we also have the ability to resist this temptation. We decide when the extra effort is worth it. Whether it is our drive to be successful, to get in better shape or to learn a craft, in striving to lead better, richer lives, we can take the time and put in the effort to improve.

When we go through this process, we find it's worth it. We are rewarded by doing things the right way. This is how we develop pride—in learning something new, in pushing ourselves further, or mastering something difficult. Through a series of choices, people grow prouder over time. We fill our lives with accomplishments and the rewards that come with them. This is the simple guide to leading an enriching life.

Communities function no differently than individuals. When community leaders choose apathy, residents follow their lead. In fact, it becomes harder for people to choose pride when they exist in apathetic places. It is easier to lead a life of pride when you find yourself in a proud environment. Plenty of people have risen above their environments, but there is a reason we find these stories exceptional. Humans are incredibly able to adapt to their environments, which is why it is so critical we provide people with quality environments to inhabit.

Once we understand these dynamics, we begin to realize how important it is that we use civic pride as the basis for making community decisions. If every decision was considered through the lens of civic pride, imagine how much better our communities would be, and therefore how much better our lives would be.

Civic pride breaks down into six major areas, and communities can use these categories to direct their focus. In putting effort towards each area, a shift will take place, where people begin to feel less apathetic about the place they call home, and find they are starting to feel proud of their place.

Six Pillars of Civic Pride

- Strengthen identity
- Foster community
- Improve aesthetics
- Facilitate ownership
- Raise standards
- Take action

The power of civic pride cannot be overstated. As people begin to feel an attachment to their town, they will begin to fight for it. They will work for it. They will defend it.

Think about the things you are proud of. You maintain them; you show them off; you treasure them. Those same tendencies would apply to our hometowns if they gave us that special feeling we get inside from the things we love.

This is the not-so-secret secret to real community development. Economic development is broken and generally just works to transfer local money to out-of-towners. Tourism is phony and does little for locals. All the tools we've been using to improve our communities for the last few decades are defunct. Civic pride is the simple way forward.

The cities that will win the future are the ones that foster civic pride.

- Cities that invest in beauty.
- Towns that work to retain and grow local ownership.
- Villages that work to foster friendships and deepen residents' roots.
- Neighborhoods that decide higher standards will improve outcomes.
- Communities that cultivate their sense of identity.
- Places that opt for action over excessive planning.

These steps will transform people's relationship to their towns. This relationship is one of the most important ones we have in our lives, and it needs to improve. It is past time we toss out community development and economic development and accept civic pride as our way forward.

Track: Sumption sets school sprinting records

Coach Marty Morlock said. “Our student athletes represented the school and town of Frederick very well. We had some personal bests turned in at the state meet, as well as great competitive efforts.”

The top finishers were Isaac Sumption, who finished fourth in the 100-meter dash, and Morgan Sumption, who came in fourth in the 800-meter run.

“I was very happy for our individual and relay place winners,” said Assistant Coach Janelle Barondeau. “It’s great to see their hard work pay off.”

Three of the five relay teams will return all four members next year, with the other two relay teams will be looking for someone to fill Isaac Sumption’s role.

Sumption graduates as the Frederick school record holder in the 100-meter dash (10.8 seconds) and 200-meter dash (22.43 seconds).

The future looks promising for seeing Frederick athletes at the state meet for years to come.

“I’m looking forward to next year, with nearly the entire squad returning,” Barondeau said. “We hope to be able to put together some competitive relays on the girls side as well.”

Participation is strong for youth baseball

By HEIDI MARTTILA-LOSURE

Baseball fans have a lot of baseball to cheer for this summer, as enough kids have signed up to field Frederick T-ball, Pee-Wee, and Midget teams, as well as a Leola-Frederick Teeners team.

The T-ball team has an especially robust roster, with 23 young ball players creating some dusty, joyful chaos when they take the field. There are 12 on the Pee Wees' roster and 15 on the Midgets' roster.

Check the "What's Coming Up" calendar for upcoming games. The Pee Wee Tournament will be in Bath on July 10-11, and the Midget Tournament will be in Andover July 17-18.
